

Marissa Ramos is a bilingual speech-language pathologist who has a “superior” ranked fluency in ASL and proficiency in protactile. She has a speech-language pathology license from LBESPA and certification from ASHA. She got her MA and BA in Communication Sciences from the University of Houston and has 30 credit hours of doctoral work in Deaf Studies and Deaf Education from Lamar University. She has worked in both mainstream and residential settings with Deaf, DeafBlind, DeafDisabled, and hard of hearing students. She has vibrancy and passion for the field and has consulted with and provided evaluations for school districts across Louisiana.